Additional Information regarding EDIS:

EDIS at West Point provides screenings, evaluations, and educational intervention services to children ages birth through 36 months who would be eligible, but for their age, to attend the DoDEA school at West Point.

EDIS services are family-centered and community-based. Services are provided to the greatest extent possible using a single provider, with consultative services available as needed with other early interventionists. EDIS services for eligible families are provided to address concerns in the areas of communication, motor skills, learning, self-help, and social interactions.

Referrals can be made directly to EDIS by the parent or legal guardian or through the child's medical provider. Parents are integral to the EDIS team as they know their child's strengths, interests, and frustrations. Don't wait. Contact EDIS if you have any questions regarding your child's developmental skills.
